How Does COVID-19 Affect Smokers?

Prevention: Quit Smoking & Vaping

With the rising Coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic and numerous cases discovered in New Mexico, NOW is the time to quit smoking and vaping to reduce your risk of a serious lung disease.

What is COVID-19?

The COVID-19 is a viral respiratory illness that can lead to lower respiratory illnesses such as pneumonia and bronchitis.

How does COVID-19 relate to smoking and vaping?

Users who continue to smoke and vape increase their chances of developing an acute respiratory distress syndrome (ARDS), including those exposed to secondhand smoke. Further, e-cigarette users have an increased susceptibility to delayed recovery from respiratory infections. Because COVID-19 affects the body's respiratory system, it puts current smokers and vapers at a higher vulnerability risk than those who do not smoke or vape.

How to protect yourself and others?

To lower your risk from developing ARDS and COVID-19 consider quitting smoking and/or vaping TODAY. Also, if you know or have loved ones who are current users encourage them to develop a quit plan and show your full support. Due to rising concerns and precautions with social distancing, our office will be responding accordingly to the COVID-19. At Keres, the health of our team is our top priority. We hope to maintain the health of all staff while continuing to provide support services to New Mexico communities and partners we currently work with. Listed below are changes for our program:

- Keres Community Health Team will be working remotely due to the main office being closed in response to COVID-19
